
Thinking Counterfactually Directions Adults Childrens Consideration

2010 adults' and children's consideration of better and ... - adults to consider worse alternatives to reality in the event of positive outcomes, and that encouraging children to merely think counterfactually may be advantageous to their experiential learning, thus enabling them to strive for future improvement. yurdagül boğar & gamze Çetinkaya aydın - o misconceptions and naive thinking about nature have possibly never disappeared from the brains of adolescents, adults, seniors, and professional scientists and, therefore, need to be inhibited.
